Repair, reuse, recycle: the circular economy of Asian goods in Europe

Goods from Asia have long been attractive to European consumers, and the flows of Asian goods into European markets have straddled the early modern and modern periods and define our consumption patterns today. That same consumer desire is at least in part responsible for the current ecological crisis, which necessitated the mantra 'repair, reuse, recycle', to encourage us all to be more careful with our consumption habits. Through a series of case studies, this talk will focus specifically on repair of Asian objects that entered European markets. It will seek to make a case for the value of damaged and repaired objects as a way of understanding the European encounter with the Asian material world.

Der Vortrag wird auf Englisch gehalten und auch online übertragen.
